How I’d redesign the parcel flow on Porter app

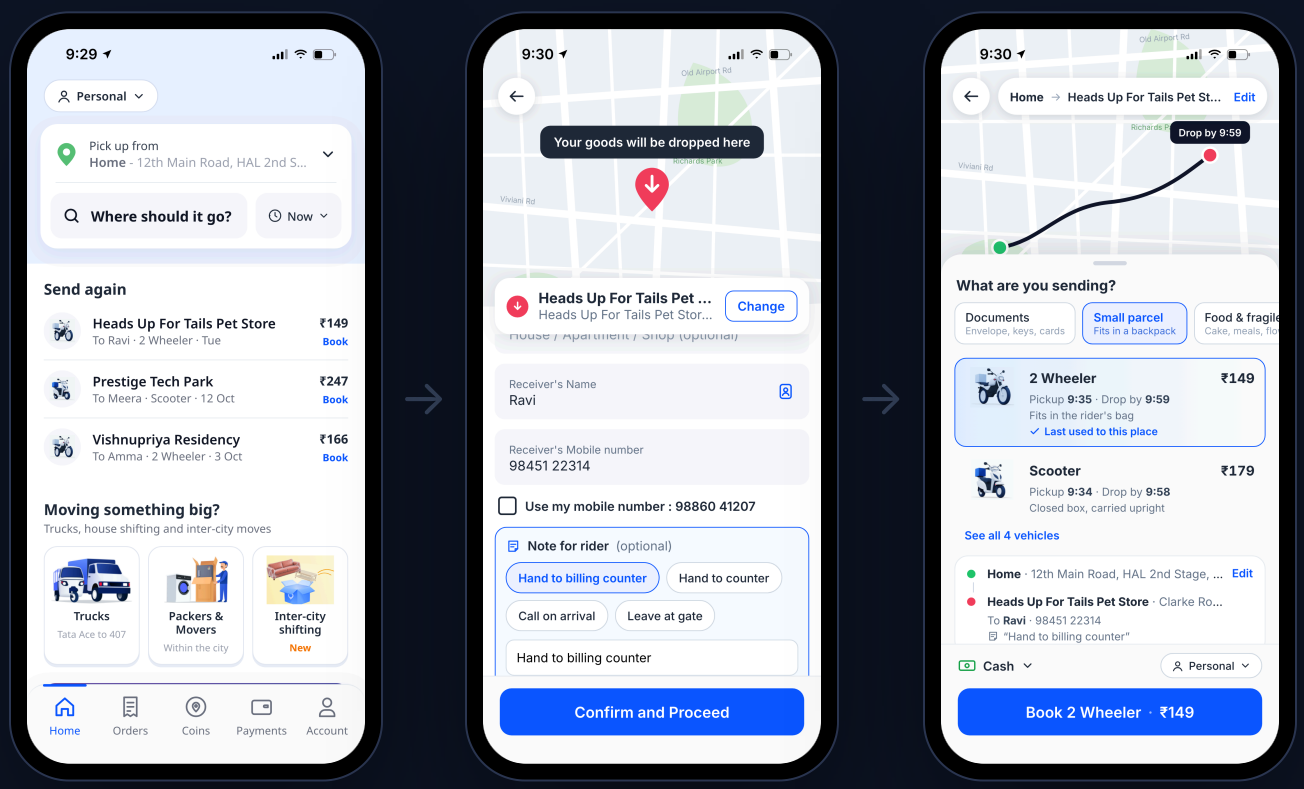

Current vs New flow

Start with where it’s going

- You pick a vehicle before you’ve said where it’s going.
- Destination first, the way Swiggy and Rapido do it.

CURRENT

REDESIGNED

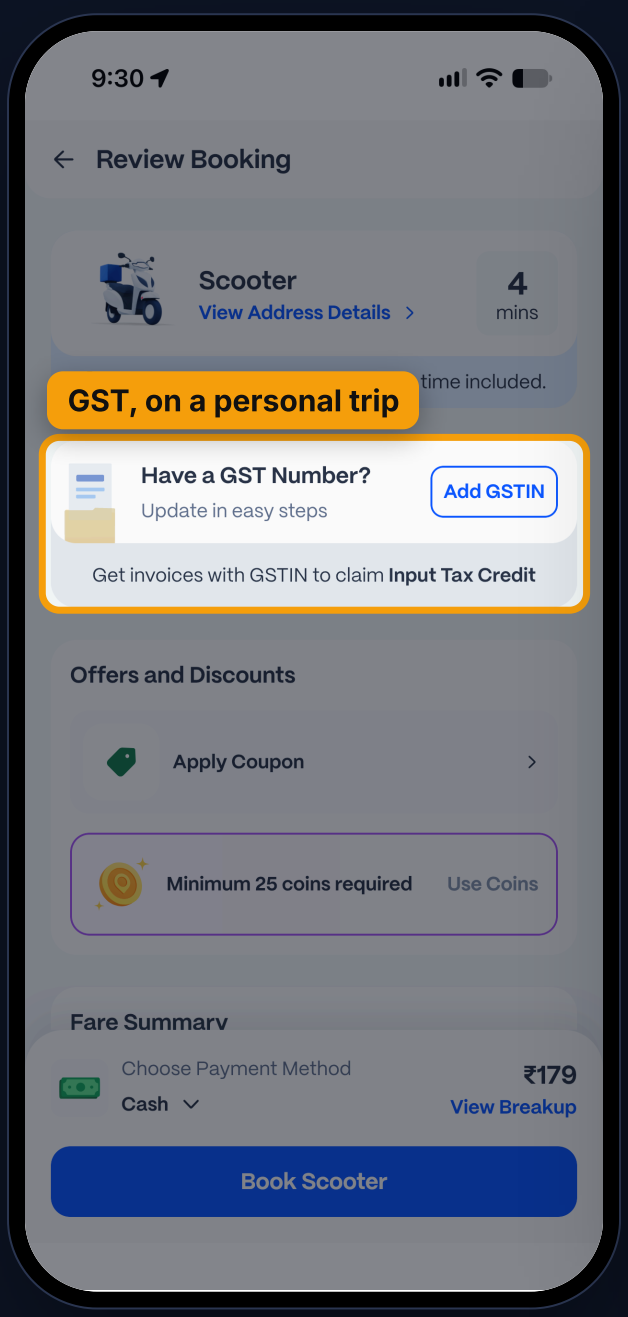

Personal and business, kept apart

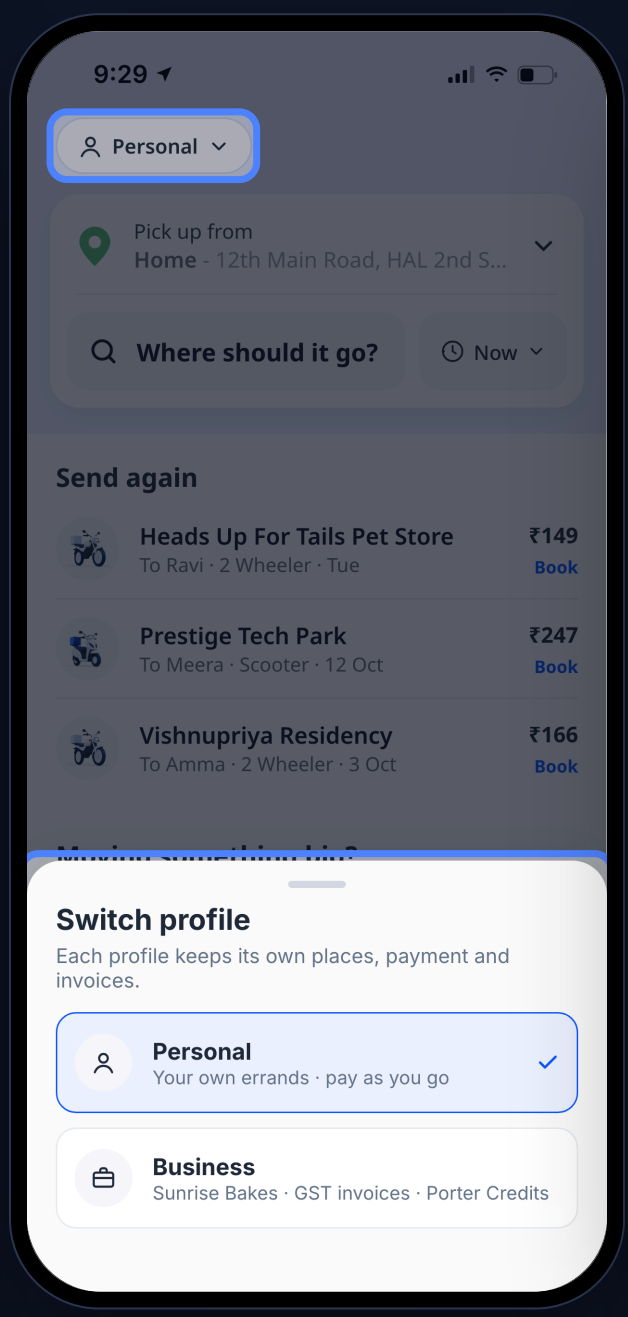

- One mode for both, so every trip gets asked for a GST number.
- One switch. Business gets its clients and invoices. Personal stays simple.

Business home

Most sends are repeats

- Every send starts from a blank search.
- Your usual drops with today's price. One tap to book.

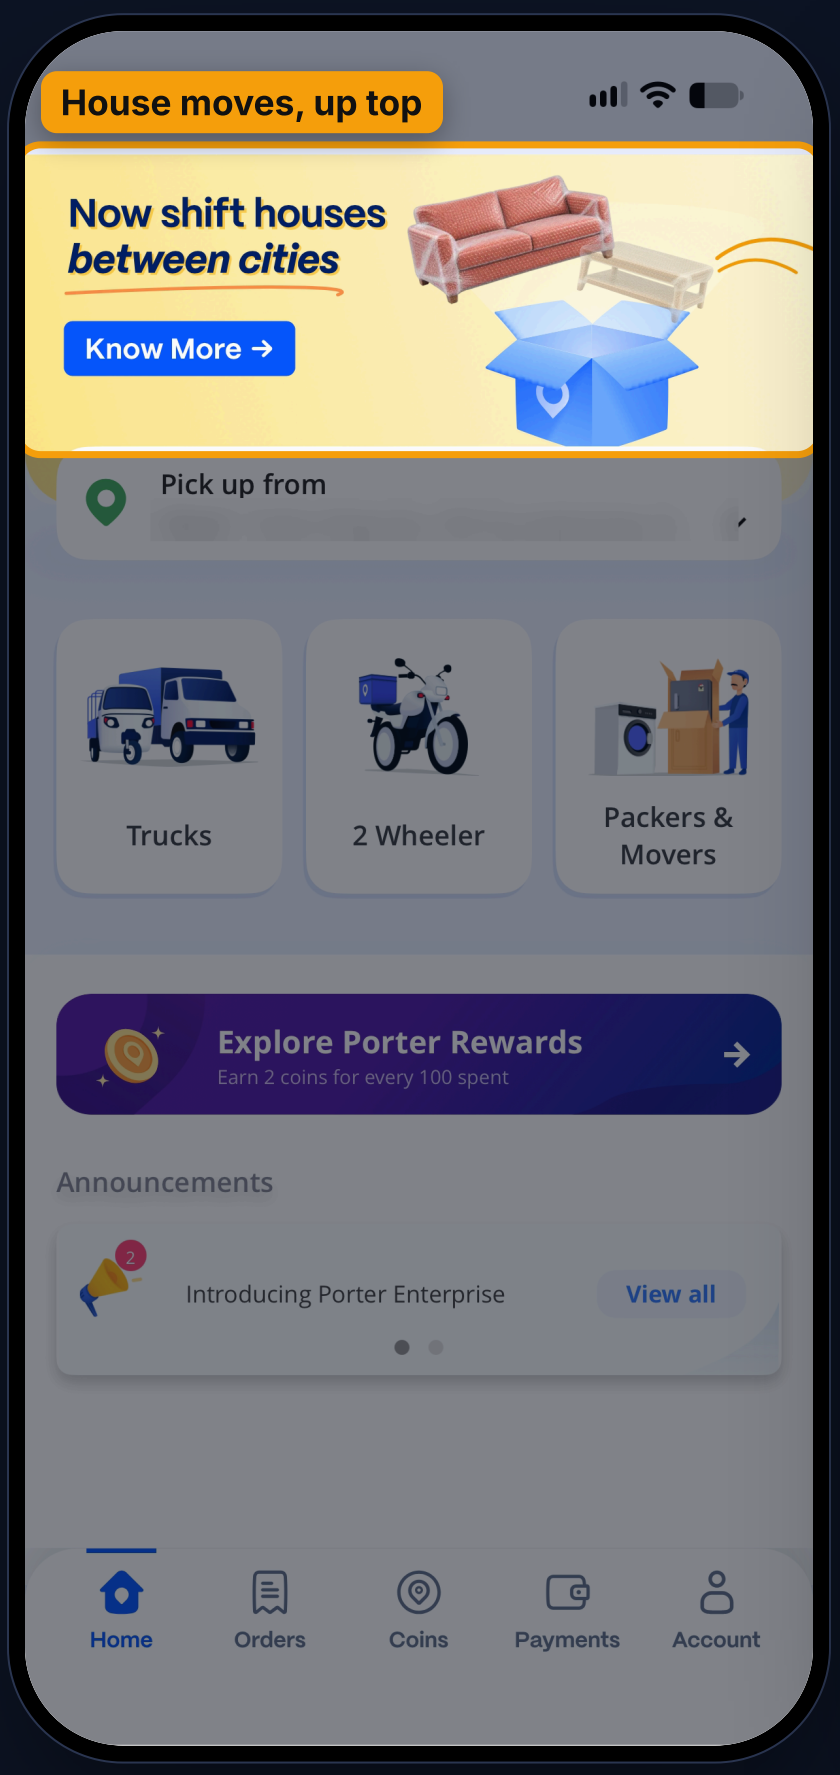

SMALL ADDITION

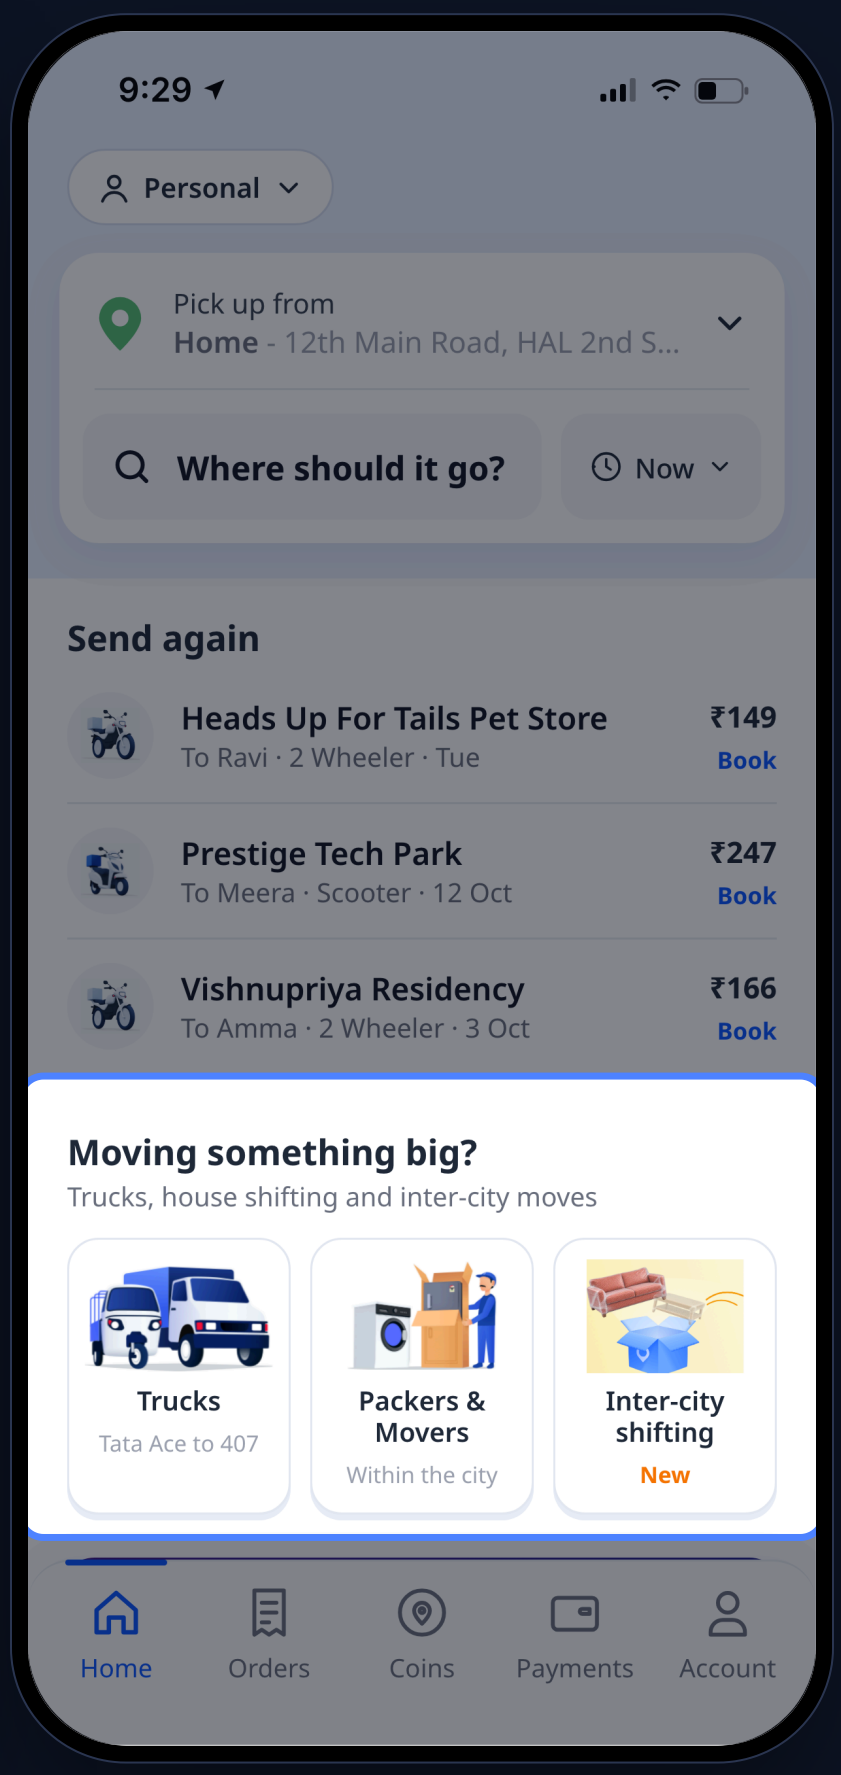

Big moves, lower down

- House shifting takes the top of the screen.
- Most people move once every few years. Still easy to find, just not in the way.

Leave the rider a note

- Riders call to ask which gate, which floor, who to hand it to.
- Write it once with the drop. It’s saved for next time.

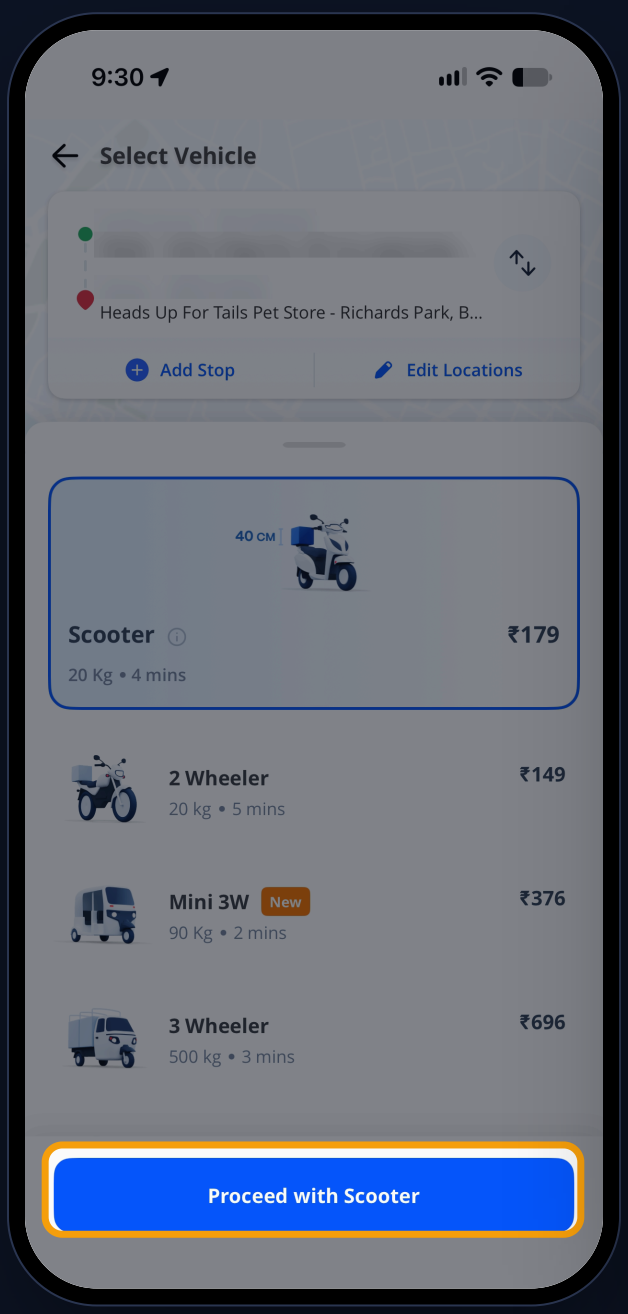

SMALL ADDITION

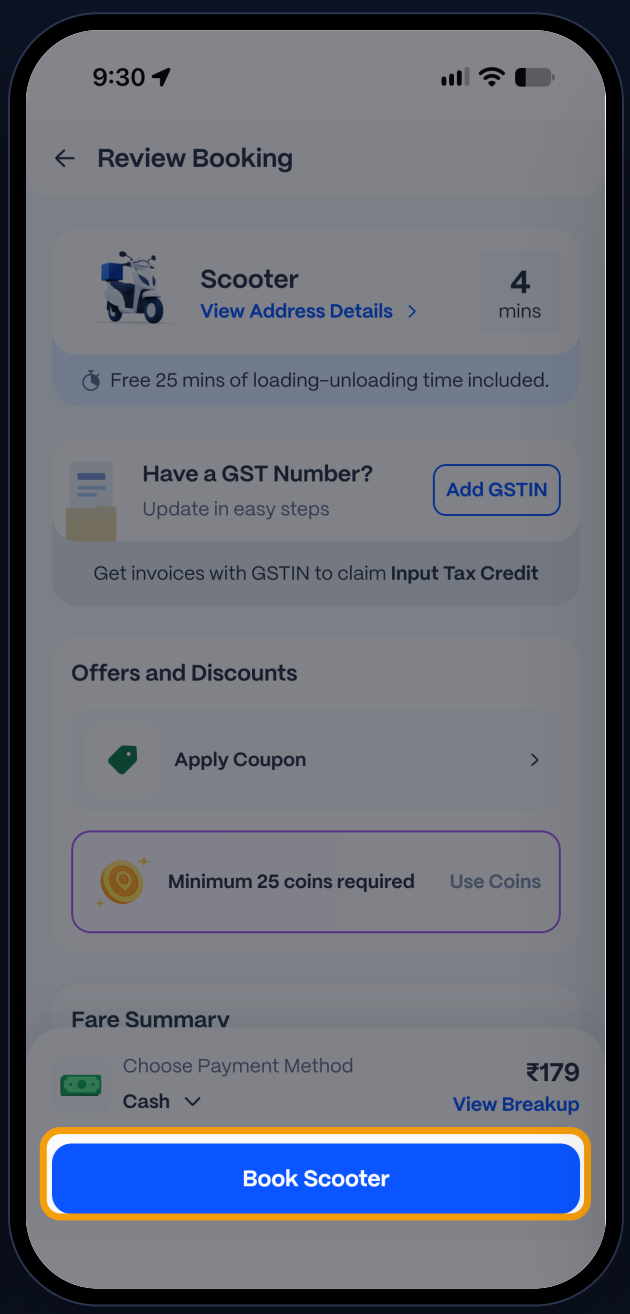

Two screens, now one

- Pick a vehicle, then review it on another screen.
- Pick and book in one place. The button says what you'll pay.

What are you sending?

- Nobody knows what their parcel weighs.
- Say what it is. We suggest the ride that fits.

CURRENT

REDESIGNED

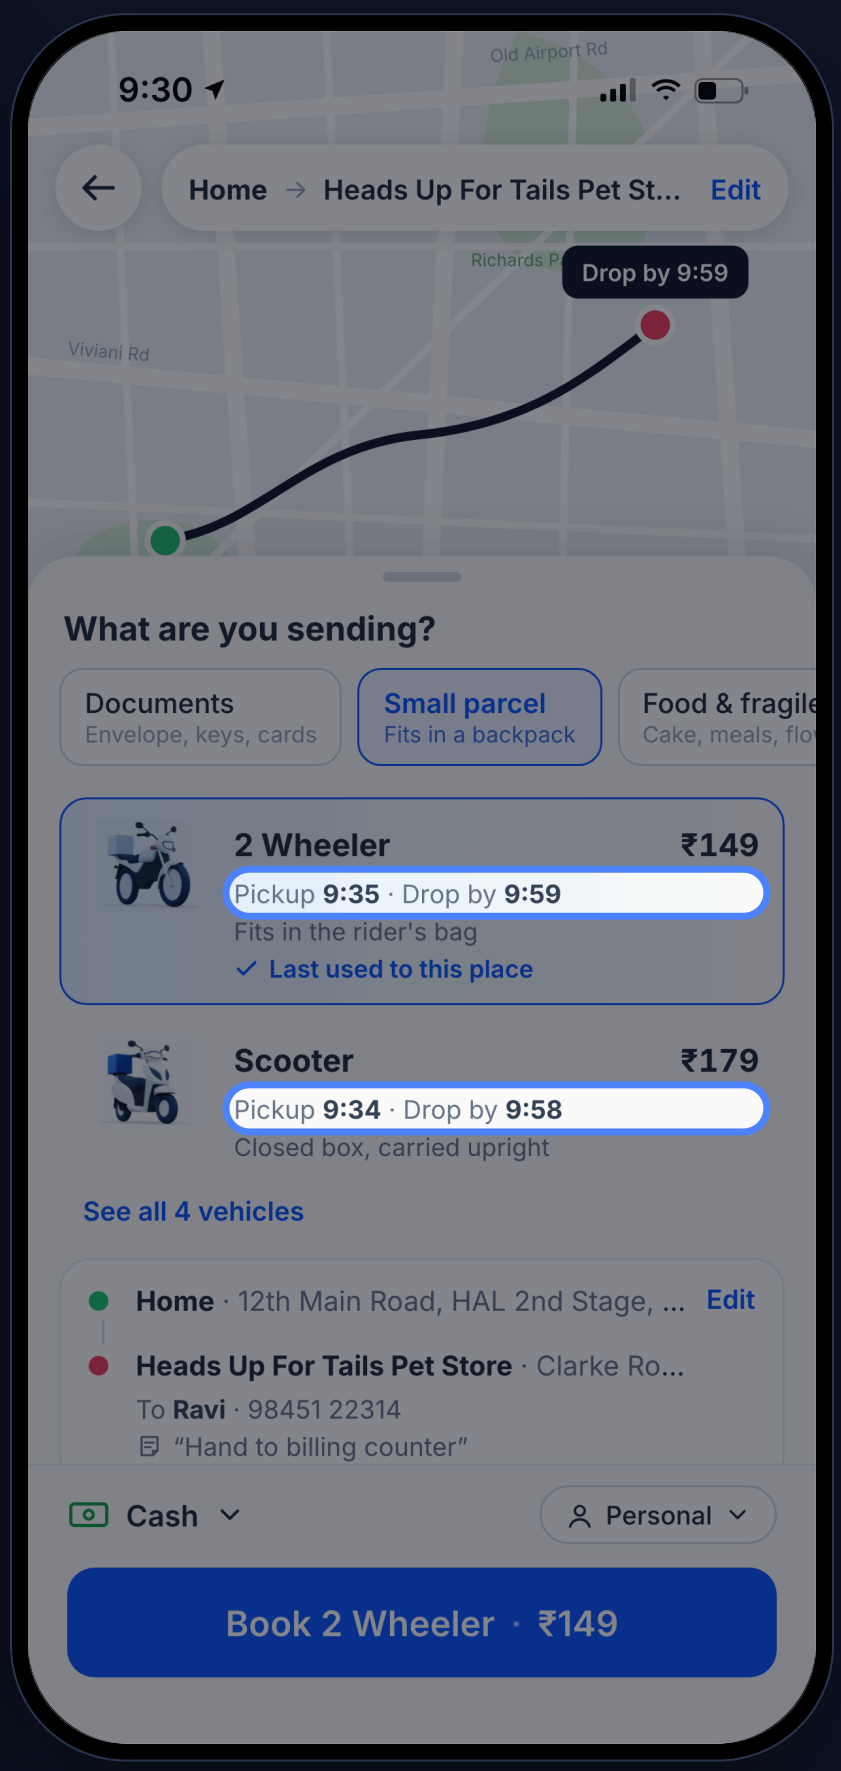

Pickup and drop-off, up front

- Every ride shows when it picks up and when it drops off.

CURRENT

The route steps aside

- Swap, add stop and edit, for a route you've already set.
- One line with an Edit. The screen is about what you're sending and which ride.

CURRENT

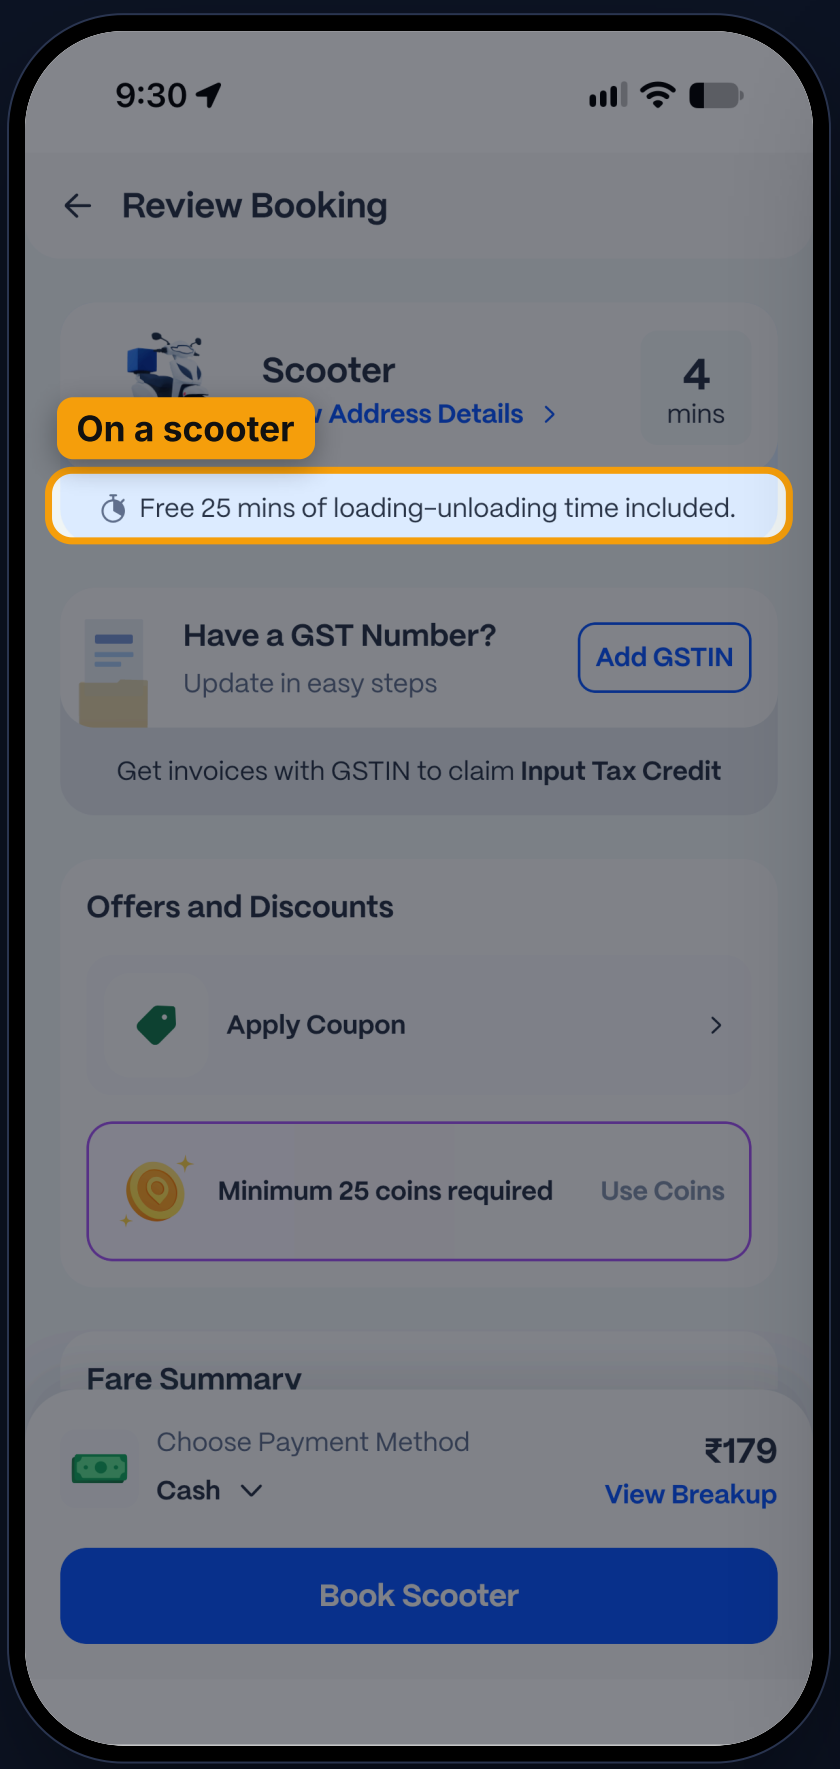

REDESIGNED

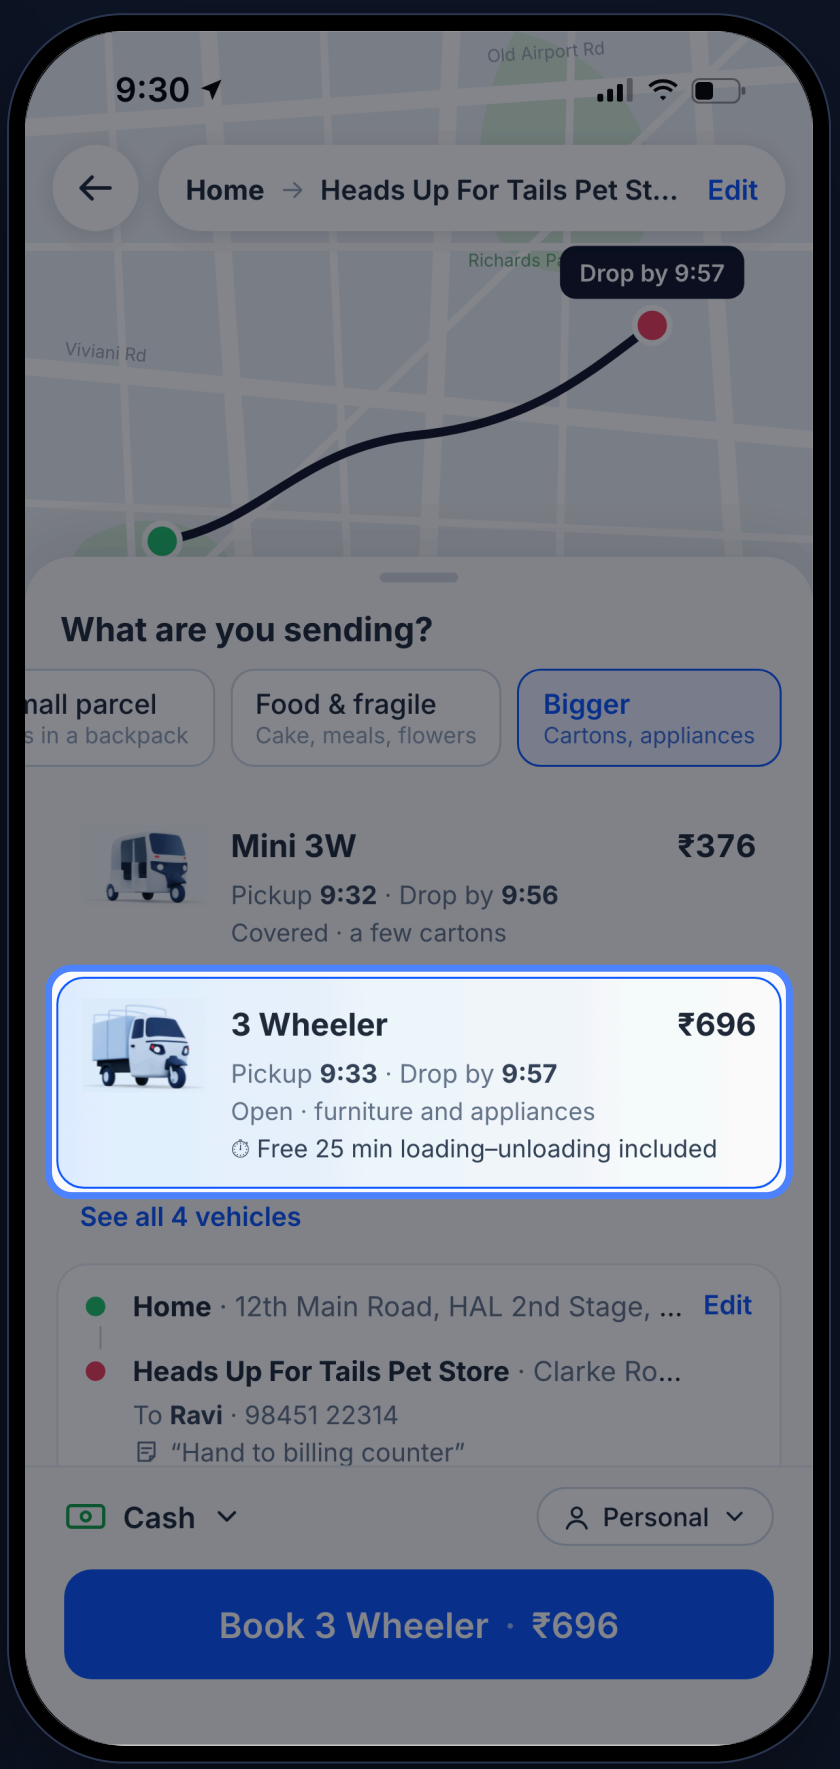

Only show what applies

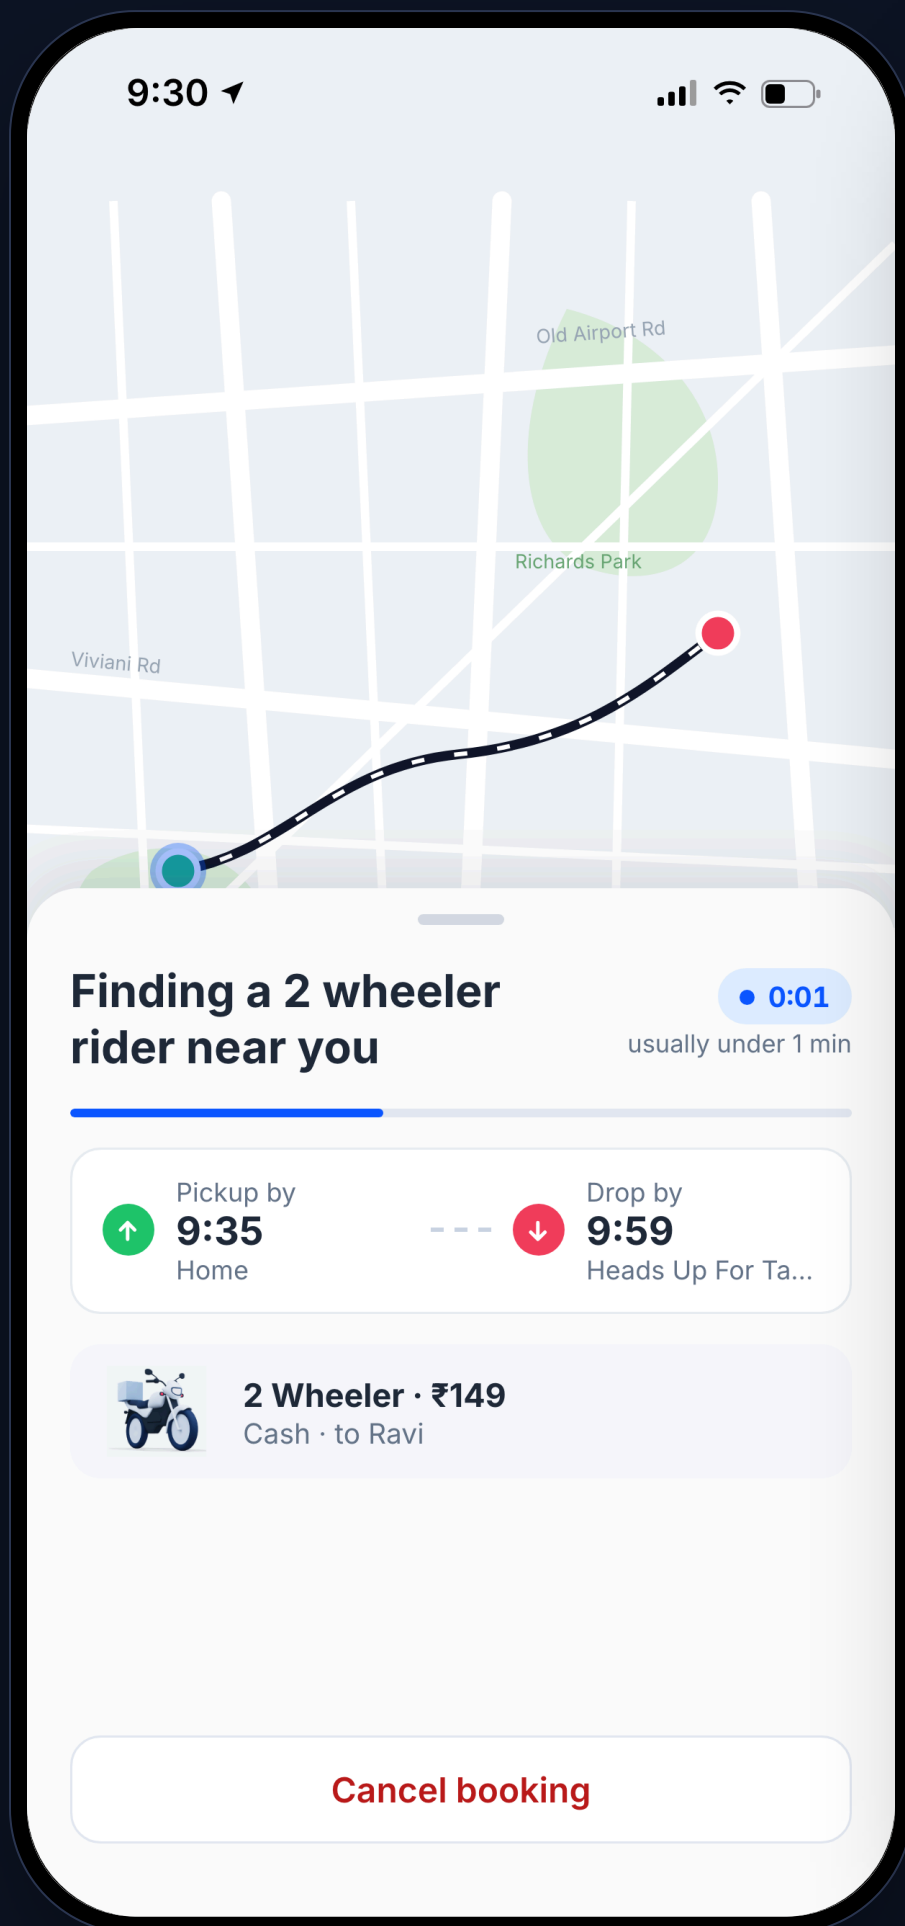

- Free loading time, offered on a scooter.
- It shows on the 3 Wheeler, where you'd actually use it.
